

JNE ScholarOne E-News#4

Happy New Year! Exciting things are happening with The Journal and that means you as readers should know about it. We are going electronic! Yes, the first electronic issues will be available starting with Winter 2013 from JSTOR. Speaking of JSTOR, they have some very interesting stats that I will be sharing under a new column titled, The Most.

ScholarOne Updates and Reminders

Reviewers and readers should always look at the FAQs attached to the platform available in the upper right-hand corner under Get Help Now. If you don't see your particular question you can ask it through the site. If that doesn't work, then you can contact me.

For example, if you need more time to do your revisions, don't wait until the system locks you out, drop me a line or go to Get Help Now.

The Most

Provided by JSTOR, these data are updated every 3 months or so to let us know who's being cited and who's being accessed. Make sure you visit www.jstor.org this year because JNE is now an e-Journal.

The most cited JNE article by other JNE authors is Molefi Kete Asante's The Afrocentric Idea in Education (JNE 60, 2, Spring 1991). This article was cited 18 times.

The most accessed article of JNE on JSTOR is Dorothy L. Hurley's Seeing White: Children of Color and the Disney Fairy Tale Princess (JNE 74, 3 Summer 2005). This article was accessed 2,304 times.

Another satisfied JNE ScholarOne E-news bulletin reader.

Lenda P. Hill

Associate Editor

The Journal of Negro Education